I. Introduction

We all know that New York city is the largest city in United States and having huge international immigration over the decades. New York city was home to nearly 8.5 million people in 2018, accounting for over 40% of the population of New York state and slightly and slightly lower percentage of the New York metropolitan area.

As there are many immigrations in this area it is required to find the best location for opening Japanese restaurant in New York. However potentially the Japanese restaurant owner can have great success but it is also considered about profit as there will be huge amount invested into it. So, our project will be done to answer questions: 1. Where should the investor open the Japanese Restaurant 2. Where should i go if i want great Japanese food? (consumer mind)

II. Data Source

The required data can be obtained by the open source https://cocl.us/new_york_dataset. After this we will obtain geographical locations that is latitudes and longitudes of neighbourhoods. Later we will use Foursquare to obtain the venue details. The project will be done by using web scrapping working with API, data wrangling, visualization.

III Methodology

After receiving the data, we will use geographical coordinates and work on it by using python geocoder package. Next, we will use Foursquare API to get the data of neighbourhoods.

This project requires the main skills like data wrangling, analysis, cleaning. After cleaning we will be comparing the Japanese restaurants in neighbourhood, Average rating of restaurants and finally we will find which place will be best to open restaurant.

IV Results

Manhattan and Brooklyn have the best rated restaurants while comparing to the remaining two. Staten Island and The Bronx have the least amount of Japanese restaurants. Based on the gathered information i would suggest to open Japanese restaurant in Brooklyn as it is having less number of restaurants moreover it is having multiple neighbourhood

V Discussion

This project mainly focusses on the point on which location it will be better to open restaurant to feel success. This mainly includes Japanese restaurants. Based on the gathered information i would suggest to open Japanese restaurant in Brooklyn as it is having a smaller number of restaurants moreover it is having multiple neighbourhood
